

University of South Australia
Division of Education, Arts and Social Sciences
School of Psychology, Social Work and Social Policy

Study on inheritance in farming/ primary producer families

PARTICIPANTS WANTED

This study aims to increase understanding of farming family inheritance practices by exploring a broad range of issues (of which business succession is just one aspect), and by involving daughters to learn about their experiences and perspectives on this topic.

The study is being conducted using online discussion groups, and will involve daughters of primary producers across Australia sharing their family inheritance experiences with other daughters. Participants will be able to take part in the online discussions at any time of the day, and may contribute as much or as little as they choose.

If you are a daughter of an Australian primary producer, at least 18 years of age, and would like to learn more about this study and how to take part, please go to the research project webpage at <http://unisa.edu.au/farming-families-study>.

This project is being undertaken by Leonnie Blumson, a PhD candidate with the School of Psychology, Social Work and Social Policy at the University of South Australia. Leonnie is also a farmer's daughter.

This project has been approved by the University of South Australia's Human Research Ethics Committee Protocol No 0000031973. If you have any ethical concerns about the project or questions about your rights as a participant please contact the Executive Officer of this Committee, Tel: 08 8302 3118; email: vicki.allen@unisa.edu.au