

FRESH LINES

a symposium by postgraduates, for postgraduates

Call for Papers:

‘Transgressions and Intersections’

The Griffith Centre for Social and Cultural Research in collaboration with the School of Humanities, Languages and Social Science are hosting Griffith’s Ninth Annual Cultural Research Postgraduate Symposium.

This one-day symposium will include multiple themed sessions where Honours, Masters and PhD students present papers based on their research. We are open to non-traditional forms of presentations.

The theme ‘Transgressions and Intersections’ is a provocation to engage with research that transcends disciplinary boundaries and social norms, while understanding the intersections that make up these spaces. Boundaries in the social world are in constant flux and thus transgressions and intersections can open up possibilities for exploring creatively and politically:

- The self
- Languages
- Bodies
- Organisations
- Environments
- Time and Space

Abstracts should be submitted by Friday, September 15 and should not exceed 200 words. Please email abstracts to freshlinesresearch@gmail.com in a standard .doc/docx format. Successful contributors will be notified by email.

There is no cost associated with attending the symposium.

Abstracts Due

Friday,
September 15, 2017

Date & Location

Friday, October 20, 2017

Griffith University,
Nathan Campus, Brisbane

Contact & Social Media

Email:

freshlinesresearch@gmail.com

Twitter: @freshlines2016